SITUATION SUMMARY

Weather of Concern

Northern California

- Another trough from the Eastern Pacific will move into the Pacific Northwest Sunday and dig southward into California bringing another wave of rain and snow showers to our region and cooler temps.
- Showers will continue into Monday but should primarily be over the western Sierra slopes and eastern side of the Sacramento Valley.
- Rain and snow amounts are not expected to be much with this system. Valley and foothill rain up to tenth of an inch with mountain snow up to 3 inches above 5000 feet is possible.

Southern California

- An upper level trough of low pressure moving through interior California will increase winds across the area. The winds will shift to the North by Saturday morning and persist through this evening.
- Sudden gusty cross winds will create dangerous driving conditions on some area roadways, including Highway 101 along the South Coast, Highways 154 and 192 in Santa Barbara County, the I-5 Corridor, Highways 14, 138, 2, and 39 in Los Angeles County and Highway 33 in Ventura County.
- A series of pacific fronts will bring strong winds and rough seas to the Southern California waters through early next week. The strongest winds will be most likely Monday through Tuesday, when gusts of 25 to 35 knots will be likely at times (30 to 40 mph). Seas and surf will also build during this period, and will be steep and rough at times. Another storm system could bring hazardous conditions once again by late next week.

County of Madera

- On 4/22/2016, at approximately 1430 hours, the County of Madera activated with one person to monitor weather and impacts from a fast-moving storm that caused several trees to fall in the City of Madera.
- No state assistance was needed.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

Brief and minor ridging will move across our area this morning but another trough will approach the coast this afternoon spreading clouds and showers eastward to the Cascades. This trough will eventually reach inland on early Sunday with the potential for isolated thunderstorms. Snow levels are hovering between 4800 and 5800 feet but are expected to lower to around 3000 feet Sunday night.

Eureka Weather:

Unsettled and cool weather will continue through the weekend with periods of showers mainly north of Cape Mendocino.

Reno Weather:

A break in the weather is expected today before more showers move in by Sunday and Monday. Temperatures will remain cool and below season averages which may allow for some valley snow showers for the Monday morning commute. Unsettled weather will continue through next week with below average temperatures.

San Francisco Weather:

Dry weather is expected along with seasonably cool temperatures through this weekend and into early next week. Locally strong and gusty northwest winds may occur from late Sunday into Monday mainly near the coast and in the hills. The next chance of rain will be around the middle of next week.

Sacramento Weather:

Dry and warmer conditions can be anticipated today. More unsettled and cooler weather can be expected Sunday-Monday, then again midweek.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will return to central California today for a drying trend and lighter winds. Another storm will drop into the great basin on Monday and bring another period of increased winds and mainly mountain showers. A potentially wet storm system will impact the area by Thursday. Temperatures will average near to slightly below normal through the period.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure aloft will build in over the weekend. There will be periods of gusty to locally strong winds for portions of the forecast area as well as a slight warmup. There will be a series of upper level disturbances that will move through the region next week with best chance of precipitation next Wednesday/Thursday expect near normal high temperatures to just below.

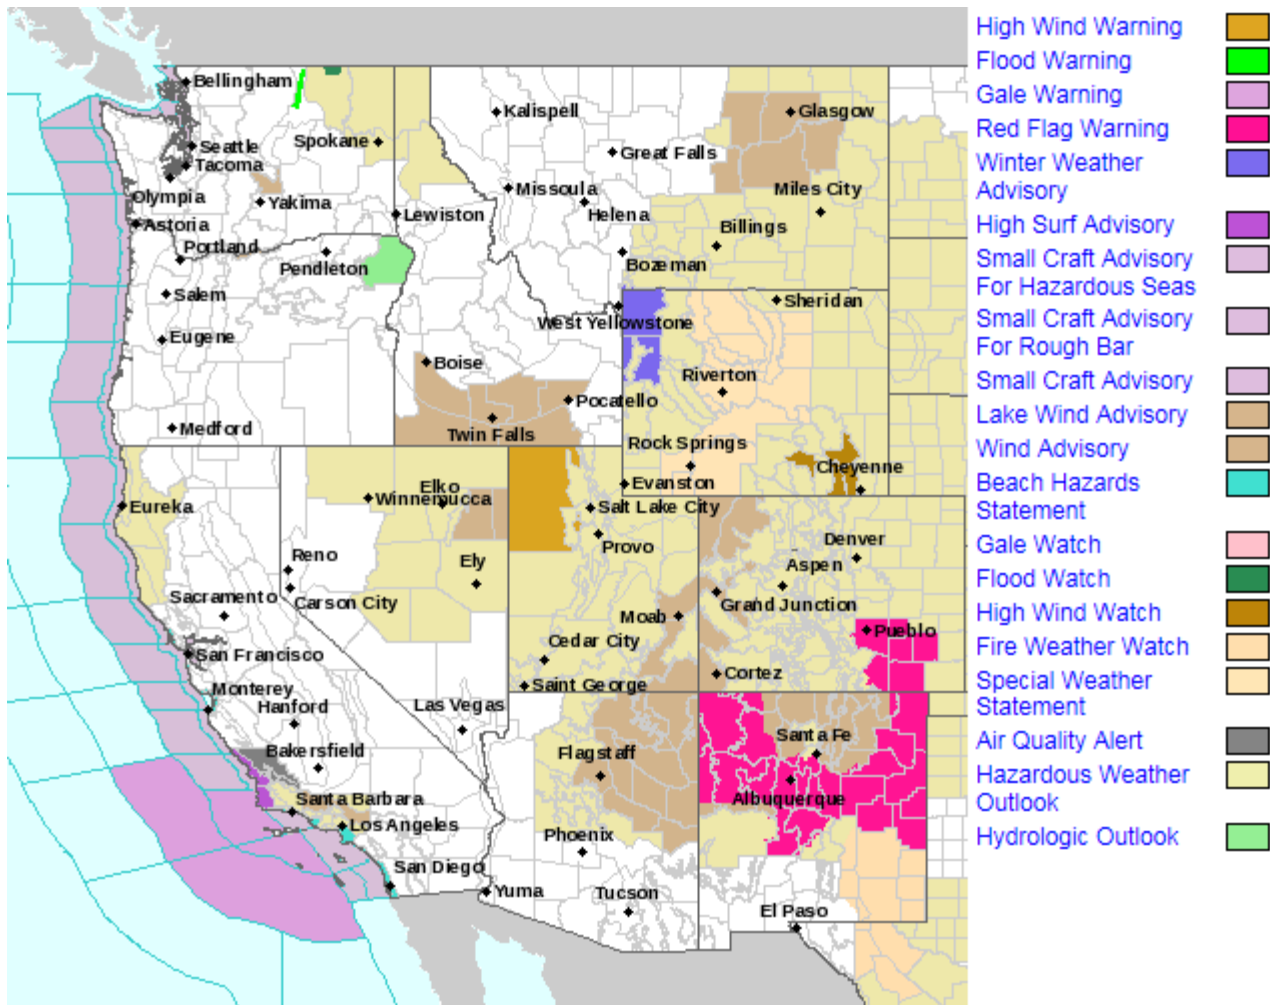

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts will weaken today as a low pressure system over the great basin moves inland. Another low pressure system from the northwest will move into California Sunday night and Monday bringing a chance of light precipitation along and west of the mountains and strong gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts.

Southeast California Weather:

Temperatures will be on a downhill trend this weekend as the first of three low pressure systems moves through the region today. Highs will drop into the 80s possibly even into the 70s through next week. The second system will affect the region late Monday into Tuesday bringing breezy to windy conditions but with little chance for any rainfall. Another storm system is likely for late next week with at least some chance of rain possible.
